

What's wrong with Money?

... and what is it doing to our Society?

Today's social and environmental challenges need financial systems that deliver a fair, democratic, and sustainable economy. One which provides affordable homes, reduces inequality and doesn't cause financial crises.

We invite you to an evening of short films on the theme of Money and Society which show that changes to make our financial and social systems more sustainable are necessary, possible and beneficial for all.

What's wrong with Money?

7.00pm, Tuesday 28th November at the Herb Garden Community Café

Many of the big social and economic problems that we're facing today are due to the way that money is created by the financial institutions. This is leading to increasing inequality, indebtedness and unaffordable housing.

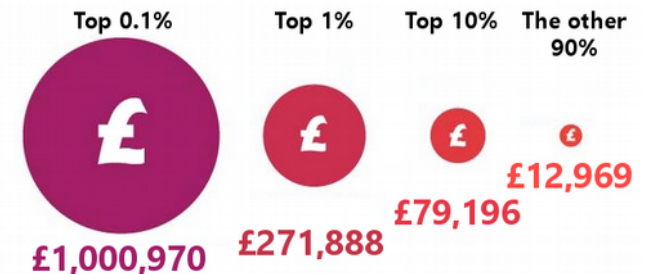

TLT member Jackie Talbott will introduce a number of important ideas, such as the Three Pillars of Sustainability and lead us through a number of short films that show what is wrong with the current systems, what different approaches are possible, and what we can do to bring about change.

Greater Equality makes our Society Stronger

In our first film Richard Wilkinson, author of 'The Spirit Level', charts the hard data on economic inequality, and shows that when rich and poor are too far apart there are real effects on health, lifespan, even such basic values as trust.

There is a vast difference between the average income of the richest and the rest of the UK.

PositiveMoney

Positive Money is an organisation set up in 2010 to campaign for changes in the money and banking systems. We'll show a number of their introductory videos covering 'Why are the Rich getting Richer' and 'Three simple changes to Banking to fix the Economy'.
